HOW TO AVOID PLAGIARISM

- Use your own words to rephrase and summarize information from a source. Even though you look at original passages—copy/paste ideas or chunks of words or phrases, rephrase them from the source but maintain the original meaning. Avoid attribution to the author of the work. This avoids accusations of plagiarism.

Some Types of Plagiarism Are:

- Other's words or ideas
- Using a paraphrase
- Using a sentence, phrase, or more as a sentence

Why is plagiarism wrong?

Plagiarism is defined as the unethical practice of using the ideas or words of someone else as if they were your own. This includes not only copying entire passages or sentences, but also paraphrasing or rephrasing parts of the text without proper attribution. Plagiarism can undermine the integrity of research and education, and it is illegal. It is important to give credit to the original authors of the work to respect their intellectual property and academic integrity.
